

Plan it

Write a very short summary of two consequences of the creation of the satellite states.

It increased tension

Stalin saw the west as a threat so wanted to protect USSR. Truman saw it as communist expansion.

Churchill's Iron Curtain Speech

Churchill publicly warned Truman that Europe had been divided in two by Stalin.

Write it

1 Explain two consequences of the creation of the Satellite States by the USSR.

Point: Say what this paragraph will be about.

One consequence was it increased tension between the two superpowers.

Evidence: Give the facts about this. Include who, what, where, when if you can

Stalin used Salami tactics to turn each of the satellite states into communist states under the control of the USSR. This meant that he took one country at a time and either fixed the elections or threatened the candidates. Truman saw this as evidence that the Soviet Union intended to spread communism worldwide.

Explain: Give the reasons the event in the question led to the event in your paragraph. You must include an explanatory connective such as because.

This led to increased tension because for Truman the creation of the Satellite states was evidence that Stalin was not to be trusted and he intended to spread communism throughout Europe even by ignoring democracy if necessary

Point: Say what this paragraph will be about.

Another consequence of the creation of the satellite states was Churchill's Iron Curtain speech.

Evidence: Give the facts about this. Include who, what, where, when if you can

In March 1946 Churchill gave a speech on a visit to the USA. He warned the Americans that a divide between East and West Europe had been created by Stalin's expansion into Eastern Europe.

Explain: Give the reasons the event in the question led to the event in your paragraph. You must include an explanatory connective such as because.

It was clear to Churchill at the beginning of 1946 that the creation of the satellite states was dividing Europe into East and West. Churchill was worried enough about the expansion of communism to warn Truman publicly.